A Dutch Farm-House.

The farmers' boys and girls of America, I am confident, would like to go with me into a Dutch farm-house. Stable and house and dairy are under the same roof. The house which we visit stands the canal almost on a level with the ridge pole. One of the dairy maids has been out to the canal to wash her pans and dishes; and now she is taking them back to the house, drawing them in a little cart. Look at her shoes—wooden all the new styles from market, consisting of the new styles from market, consisting of the shoes taking market, and are receiving. on the bank of the canal-the water on ones, turning up at the toe like a skate -clump, clump, clump they go as she steps. She has a bounct so curious that I shall not attempt to describe it, but of just such a pattern as those worn by her grand-mother. Some of the cattle are in the fields, blanketed to keep them. FURNISHING GOODS

A girl with red cheeks and bright eyes opens the door of the stable, and takes us along the stalls to see the cows -26 cows standing by their cribs, or ly-ing down chewing their cuds, fastened Stock of ing down chewing their ends, fastened with rope halters—and, funniest of all sights, each cow has her tail drawn up to the ceiling by a cord and pulley, so that in time their tails grow straight up into the air! there are great tubs filled with milk and curds and whey; there is a fire-place in the stable where they scald the milk, also the cheese-press. We enter a little room and see pots of butter and rows of cheeses—not such great ones as the Vermont and New Hampshire girls turn out, but cheeses almost the size of a 64-pounder cannon ball not quite round, but like the earth, the content of the content flattened a trifle at the poles. They are kept for months and years even, and never lose their goodness, it is said.

We go from the stables up a short flight of steps, into the kitchen, and say, "Good morning" to the farmer's wife, who curteseys like a little child. She shows us over the house, draws aside a curtain, and shows the beds in the recesses along the wall like a berth in aship. An old clock—its brass weight and pendulum as bright as sand and soap can make them-ticks in one cor- This. ner. The good woman is drinking a cup of coffee, but if you were to ask her to write out the word for you in Dutch, it would read "Kaffij," and she would call a railroad a "Spoorweg." She takes great pleasure in showing us her treasthe richest mahogany, set off with bed mountings, with carved feet like lion's claws—with rows of delift china dishes around the room just under the ceiling—old ware, cups and supers which by -old ware, cups and saucers which her great-grandmother used, which she will hand down to her daughters, and they to their children. Everything is so clean and nice that you are almost afraid to be in the room,-"Carleton" in Boston is a The Boston Journal says: "In his avowal of principles the Chief Justice seems clear and emphatic enough. He stands by his record in favor of equal rights 'without jot or tittle of abatement.' Every old friend of his will be glad to hear that. But so far as he insinuates a political application of these principles, he becomes rather obseure and unsatisfactory. If he really thinks that the Republican party is in danger of falling away from these great principles, or is not worthy of trust, on any account, in connection therewith, why does he not say so plainly?'
